Named Uovo

(<https://www.instagram.com/uovopasta/>) (which means “egg” in Italian), this small shop from founding Sugarfish partner Lele Massimini ships its handmade pasta nightly from Bologna, Italy. But why? Because of special red yolked eggs that aren’t available Stateside, and have been the key to superior noodles by generations of Italy’s legendary female pasta makers (“sfogline”).

Uovo features a menu of classics like lasagna, cacio e pepe, all’amatriciana, and tortellini en brodo—all precisely-crafted in a kitchen in Italy, with sauces prepared locally in Santa Monica. Despite the high-quality ingredients and international pasta-making process, Uovo is a casual Italian restaurant, with prices to match: dishes are $16 or less.
